Trade Surplus

Trade Surplus Rises - Following a decline in January, the U.S. agricultural trade surplus turned upwards again in February, growing $184 million to $1.6 billion, which was close to its average value of the previous 5 months. Agricultural exports rose $119 million in February, and imports fell slightly.

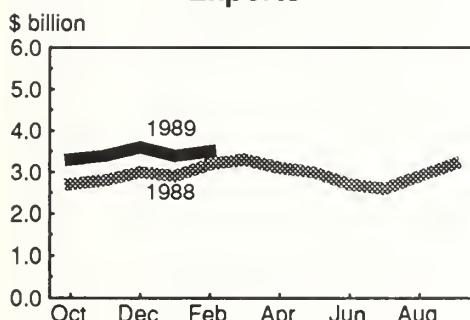

Exports Up - U.S. agricultural exports increased in February, surpassing January's level by $119 million, reaching nearly $3.5 billion. Wheat, cotton, hide, and meat exports rose, offsetting lower exports of corn, soybeans, and tobacco.

Wheat exports climbed 307,000 tons as shipments to the USSR more than doubled from January's 300,000 tons. Shipments to China, Mexico, and Venezuela also grew in February, helping offset reduced shipments to Pakistan and Korea. Average export prices remained about the same in February, and export value rose only $46 million.

Cotton exports rebounded strongly in February, climbing $75 million and 56,000 tons. Shipments rose to the largest U.S. cotton customers, Japan and Korea, but shipments to Egypt showed the strongest gain. Exports were also higher to China and Iraq. Although the gain in cotton exports was unusually large during February, January's equally unusual decline netted a 2-month average close to normal seasonal patterns.

U.S. corn exports fell 500,000 tons in February. Reduced exports to Japan and Mexico accounted for most of the month-to-month change, offsetting larger shipments to the EC. Shipments totaled 3.9 million tons and $477 million. Although 517,000 tons and $74 million lower than during January, February corn exports were still well above those of 12 months earlier. February marked the fifth consecutive month that U.S.

Exports

Imports

corn exports to the USSR exceeded 1 million tons, the longest such stretch of shipments since FY 1985.

U.S. soybean exports fell 277,000 tons and $79 million in February as overseas customers increasingly focused on Brazilian and Argentine oilseeds. Shipments to Japan were up sharply to 423,000 tons and shipments to Taiwan rose as well. However, shipments to the EC and Korea were lower. (Stephen MacDonald, 202-786-1821).

Imports Lower - U.S. agricultural imports totaled $1.9 billion in February, $65 million below the previous month, and lower than February 1988. Nearly all commodities fell in value from January to February, with the exception of fruits and vegetables which rose 13 percent as seasonally higher purchases continued. Coffee imports in February dropped 14 percent below the previous month. The Mexican Government temporarily suspended shipments of feeder cattle to the United States in late March. But this may have little aggregate impact since imports of feeder cattle are usually heaviest in the November-February period. (Steve Milmoe, 202-786-1821).

Export Share of Production - U.S. agricultural export volume increased as a share of production during FY 1988 to 18 percent, the most in 4 years. Exports increased 15 percent to 148 million tons, while U.S. agricultural production fell 11 percent. FY 1988's 18 percent share compares favorably with the 14 percent share of the preceding 2 years, but remains well under 1981's record 24 percent. However, wheat exports reached a near-record 73 percent of production, exceeded only by FY 1973's 89 percent share. Exports of hops, almonds, soybeans, and rice all exceeded 50 percent of production. (Steve Milmoe, 202-786-1821).
